(9A) Abstract (This has a maximum of 250 words. It contains 1-2 sentences of rationale, followed by objectives, brief methodology, major findings, and implications of impact of the study.)

The study is a descriptive-qualitative research design using the face-to-face interview, which used to gathered information about uncovering luwa sa patay of Capiz. Specifically, it aimed to answer the following questions: (1) How is luwa sa patay practiced in the province of Capiz?; (3) What is the importance of luwa sa patay during vigils for the dead?; (4) What are the common themes gathered from the luwa sa patay?; (5) What recommendations can be gathered from the informants to preserve this tradition?; and, (6) What output can be developed to propagate and preserve luwa sa patay as a literary genre? A validated self-constructed interview schedule was used to gather the needed information in uncovering the perspectives of the different luwa sa patay. The informants of the study were 16 elders which suited the criteria for the informants of this study using purposive sampling. The data gathered from recorded interview was transcribed and coded. The researchers used thematic analysis to organize and group the data and to look at the emerging themes.

(9B) Keywords (Write 3-6 words you used in the study, preferably not found in the title because words in the title are already given keywords. This would also include process, or methodology employed.)

Key Words: Capiz, oral traditions, folk literature, luwa sa patay

(10) Introduction (This includes the rationale, background of the study, and objectives which are not divided by subheadings. Incorporate at least three (3) reviews)

The oral traditions of Capiz depict the creative and authentic history, culture, tradition, beliefs and practices of its people through time. These oral traditions are being celebrated and practiced in various settings, times and events from the Capisnons' episode of births until deaths where luwa sa patay has been exposed.

Luwa is a type of Capisnon poetry consisting of four lines (Hosillos, 1992). It is usually made up of four rhyming lines with every line having 5,7,9 or 11 syllables. While according to Teodoro (n.d.), luwa was originally recited by Ilonggo natives during a pamilasyon (vigil) in the wake of a beloved kin. It is at first intended to be funny and lewdly suggestive to appease the dropping shoulders of the relatives of the departed.

According to Cichon (2012), luwa is a kind of poetry that usually has four lines. The first stanza of corridor uses this, and a kind of poetry that shows the heroic acts of kings and queens. Also, there are some luwa that are used to earn the hands of a lady and the example topics are love, death, courtship, sorrows, happiness, desires and disasters which is commonly used in Capiz, Antique and Guimaras.

Unfortunately, the impact of globalization is threatening the characteristic boundary maintenance strategies of ethno-linguistic groups. People moved to the cities, and return home for weekends, develop a highly ambiguous relationship with their rural roots. Responses of this have been varied around the world, but movements to encourage "cultural revival" and "heritage" are not uncommon. These are often driven not by the rural populations whose heritage is threatened by educate urban elites who promote these movements for a complex of reasons that may include identity loss (Blench and Campos, 2015).

In this study, the researchers wanted to rebirth and reintroduce luwa sa patay and introduce them again in the present generation as a literary genre which can be used as a supplemented material in the curriculum. The researchers wanted to provide background knowledge on the different perspectives considered as one of the oral traditions of the past.

Statement of the Problem

This study was conducted to identify and analyze luwa in the province of Capiz. Specifically, this study aims to answer the following questions:

1. How luwa is practiced by elders in Capiz?
2. What is the importance of luwa during vigils for the dead?
3. What are the common themes gathered from the luwa?
4. What output can be developed to propagate and preserve luwa sa patay as a literary genre?

(11) Materials and Methods or Methodology (This includes the materials, methods, duration & location of the study. Materials and Methods are headings used in Natural Science researches and methodology is Social Sciences. Presentation of materials may not necessarily be in separate heading but may be incorporated in the specific methods used. Justify paragraphs with main headings in caps.)

Research Design

This study used a descriptive-qualitative research design. According to Lambert & Lambert (2012), qualitative descriptive research design needs to be the design of choice when a straight forward description of a phenomenon is desired. It is a design that is very useful when researchers want to know, regarding events, who were involved, what was involved, and where did things take place. In this study, it is applied to summarize and to comprehend the data.

In the context of the study, descriptive-qualitative research design was used to uncover the luwa sa patay and to document the common themes that the informants used in practicing luwa sa patay.

Time and Place/Key Informants of the Study

This study was conducted from July to December 2021 in the province of Capiz. Participants of the study were determined according to their age and knowledge on how luwa sa patay was practiced in the province of Capiz.

Sample Size

According to USAID (1996), the key informants in qualitative descriptive research design are 15 to 35 people selected for their first-hand knowledge about a topic of interest. The researchers decided to have one key informant who knows how luwa sa patay was practiced in each municipality

Sampling Procedure

This study used a non-probability type of sampling called purposive sampling. According to Foley (2018), purposive sampling also known as judgmental, selective, or subjective sampling, is a form of non-probability sampling in which researchers rely on their own judgment when choosing members of the population to participate in their study. In choosing the respondents of the study, the researchers selected their respondents based on their knowledge about luwa sa patay.

Research Instrument

The face-to-face interview/virtual interview method was used to gather the needed data. The interview questions were translated in the dialect of the informants. To ensure the credibility of the collected data, voice recording and videography was used. In the first part, the researchers gathered the needed profile variables of the respondents, while the second part was the main questions section composed of five (5) items.

Items A (How is luwa sa patay practiced), B (Importance of Luwa sa Patay during vigils for the dead), C (Examples of Luwa sa Patay), D (Common Themes), E (Recommendation to Preserved Luwa sa Patay) composed of statements that will aim the gather data on the informant's knowledge about luwa sa patay.

Validity

The instrument was subjected to face and content validity. The researchers asked the help of a panel of experts to see if the researcher made an interview schedule and was able to elicit and gather the needed data for the study. Correctness and redundancies of question was reviewed. After several corrections, the instrument was deemed revised and collected until it is valid by the experts in terms of content and structure.

Data Analysis Procedure

The gathered data were analyzed using the thematic analysis. According to Braun and Clarke (2006), thematic analysis is a widely used method of analysis qualitative research. In 2006, Braun and Clarke published an article that described the novice researcher how to use thematic analysis in a step-by-step manner. Braun and Clarke state that thematic analysis is a foundational method of analysis that needed to be defined and described to solidify its place in qualitative research.

First step, the researchers transcribed all data by converting all the data into textual form. Some of the data was surely largely unstructured and sometimes makes no sense therefore, the researchers removed the uncommon data through transcription.

Second step, the researchers organized the data by going back to the research objectives or questions and then organized the collected data according to the objectives/questions.

Third step, the researchers coded the data by categorizing the data into concepts, properties and patterns and to help the researchers give meaning to the collected data from the field. Fourth step, the researchers validated the data by highlighting the importance of the study.

Last step, the researchers concluded the data analysis by presenting the data analysis as a final report that states the processes and methods of the research data.

(12) Results and Discussions (This part contains presentation of results (data) with reference to the table and figure, to be followed by discussion, with support of reviewed literature. Sequence shall be based on the objectives of the study. Tables are formatted without the vertical lines. Horizontal lines are set at the top and bottom portions as well as below table headings and above major subdivisions. Justify paragraphs with main headings in caps.)

The Practice of Luwa sa Patay

Most of the informants stated that the common themes were about what luwa sa patay during vigils and luwa sa patay as part of bordon. It can be implied that luwa sa patay were usually practiced by the elders as a part of a game and traditions.

Luwa sa patay During Vigils

Luwa during vigils or wakes serves as an entertainment to keep them awake and to lessen the pain that the family had felt due to the loss of their loved ones. It is also said that you cannot recite luwa when you are not in the proper place like burial because something bad will happen to you.

"Ang luwa sa patay ginahimu ina sang naga pulaw para nga malambutan sila asta mag aga sang ila pinulaw. That is a part of a hampang abi nga malingaw lingaw sila. Ma umpisa sila sa hampang, parehas abi sang, patiug tiug, saotilla, tapos daw truth or dare, bala mga muna tapos kung ma perdi ka, dira ka dayun ma luwa." –Informant A

"Ang luwa sa patay, hampang ina sa pag lipay sa namatyan, hampang ina sang mga pamatanon kag sang mga tawo, kay gusto nila i-comfort ang napatyan agud mahagan hagan ila nga kasubo". - Informant I

"Indi ka man mag luwa kung wala patay, kung magpamelason ka, dira gahampang kamo kaangay sang bordon." –Informant J

Luwa sa Patay as Part of Bordon

Luwa originally came from the Ilonggo native during a vigil (Pamilasyon) in the wake of a beloved kin. Whoever is the loser in a game like bordon, konggit or truth or consequence will recite a luwa as a punishment. Bordon is a kind of game in which the participants form a circle with a hidden stone or ring in a participant's hands and the participants of the game will relay it from one another. Then, there is a person inside the circle that will find the stone and if the person inside the circle finds the stone, the participant who holds the stone will be the one to recite the luwa sa patay but if the person inside the circle did not find the stone the bordon will continue.

Ang tanan nga gusto mag intra sa hampang nga ina kaangay sang bordon, magatipon sila pabilog kag maupisa sila hampang sng bordon. Samtang may is aka tawo sila tunga kung tawgo nila "uti", samtang gakanta sila sang burdon may bato nga gamay nga gina pasa-pasahan kung tawgon "piyon", kag kung sin-o ang madakpan nga siya ang may haid sang piyon, dira nadayon maumpisa ang paghambal sang luwa – Informant N

Gatipon sila samtang ga pungko. Sang una ang mga balay salog, waay sang mga lamesa. Makatin-katin kag mag-hawiray. "Bordon, bilas bordon" gasubong na sila, tapos may bato nada nga isaylo saylo, may kuring na sa tunga, dakpon sang kuring kung diin dapit and bato. Atong nadakpan mahambal sa sang luwa. – Informant M

Importance of Luwa sa Patay

All the informants stated that the importance of luwa sa patay during vigils for the dead gives entertainment to the people who attended the vigil so that they would not feel asleep and to keep them awake until dawn. It could also lessen the sorrows that the family had felt due to the loss of their loved ones.

For Entertainment

Some of the informants stated that there were some luwa sa patay that were bawdy and humorous and it helped the participants to be entertained and to laugh and also to enjoy the time that the participants shared together even in a sad situation.

Para malingaw ang mga tawo sa sulod sang napatyan, kag para masadyahan ang mga naga pamilasyon. – Informant E

Ang makuha mo da, syempre kasadya, ang masadya kung mag tiripon kamu da sang mga tawo dira. – Informant J

Keeping them Awake

Some of the informants stated that luwa sa patay helped the people who went to vigil to be active and alive until dawn. The family or the people who went to vigils for the dead also stays awake until dawn because it is also one of the traditions and culture during vigils for the dead.

Ga hatag kasadyahan sa mga ga pamilasyon, para maagahan sila sa belasyunan. -Informant D

Para ang naga lamay, ang ila pag pulaw malawig, indi ka pagtuyuhon kay kung naga pinungko kalang naga pang luya ka. - Informant M

To Lessen the Pain

Some of the informants stated that luwa sa patay also helps to lessen the sorrows that the family's felt due to the loss of their loved ones. The participants entertain the family and pay their attention in games like bordon, truth or consequence, konggit and whoever is the loser in the game will recite a luwa as a punishment. It helps to lessen the pain that they felt for the meantime.

(13) Conclusions and Recommendations (This part shall be written in narrative form and arranged based on the objectives and findings. Conclusions are general statements answering the objectives. Recommendations are based on the conclusions. They may be split or combined based on their length, which means, conclusions and recommendations may be split under separate headings if they are long. Justify paragraphs with main headings in caps.)

Conclusions

Based on the findings of the study, the following conclusion were drawn:

1. Luwa sa patay is a practice during vigils of the dead because technology and gambling was not common during the old days and also luwa sa patay was practiced as part of a game and whoever is the loser in a game like bordon, konggit or truth or consequence will recite a luwa as a punishment.
2. Luwa sa patay serves as their entertainment during vigils for the dead, to keep them awake until dawn and it helps the family to lessen the burden that they feel about the loss of their loved ones.
3. Luwa sa patay have a different kinds of themes such as love, death, courtship, sorrows, happiness, desires and disasters and the common themes that the researchers observed from the given examples of luwa sa patay are happiness, desire and love which was commonly used by the informants during vigils for the dead.
4. Some of them recommended that today's generation should ask the elders in the community on how luwa sa patay was practiced and some of them also recommended to keep the tradition alive nowadays and some of them stated that luwa sa patay was not popular in today's generations.
5. The booklet can help introduce what is luwa sa patay in today's generations and it can help to give knowledge how it was practiced as a tradition during vigils for the dead from the past.

Recommendations

Based on the derived conclusions in this study, the following recommendations are suggested:

1. Today's generation should practice luwa sa patay to lessen the addiction in technology and gambling during vigils for the dead.
2. The people who knows how to practice luwa sa patay should introduce this tradition to the younger generations so that the younger generations can practice and can experience luwa sa patay during vigils from the dead and how it was done as game.
3. People nowadays must give value in this kind of tradition because it helps them to remember and understand the own history of Capiz as a wealthy hometown cultures, beliefs and traditions through the examples. The younger generations should also try to make new examples of luwa sa patay for today's generation to develop something new and should try to find or ask about the elders in their community more about the common themes in able for them to get to know more what luwa sa patay is.

4. The trend in today's generation is really way far different from the past so the young people should always keep in mind that they should value the practice and traditions of the past generation.

5. The young generation should try to read some other articles and research more about luwa sa patay and other historical traditions and practice of their community.
